Alex Amini (b.1964, Stuttgart, Germany) is an Iranian-Italian artist who lives and works in New York City. Amini studied architecture at Pratt Institute and Cooper Union from 1982-1992. His background in architecture has largely influenced his art practice, which spans various forms including painting, drawing, sculpture and installation. Amini has exhibited his work internationally, in group shows at Project B, Milan; Xerxes Gallery, London; La Talpa e L'orologio, Imperia, Italy; Passo Blu Gallery, Genoa, Italy; and New York University, New York. Recent solo exhibitions include "Recordings" at Art Seen 107 Gallery in Arkansas in 2011.
